

SecondCrate

Every good lot
deserves a buyer

Recovery for cancelled
wholesale produce orders

Shivam Gupta

AWS CDS Agentic AI Partner Hackathon

SECONDCRATE

A cancelled order leaves a clock running 40

crates of cherry tomatoes

200 kg already at the depot

An order cancels

The lot is already at the depot

Dispatch approaches

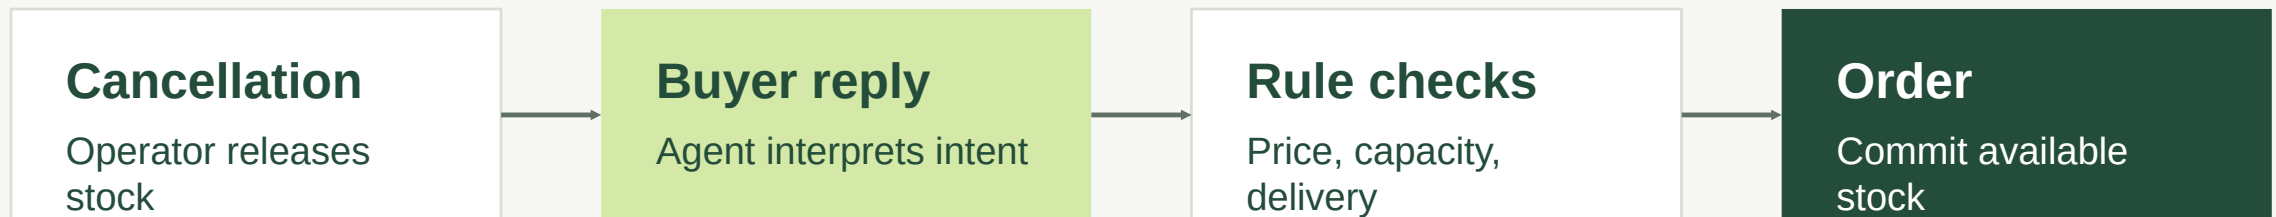

The operator sets the available window

Who can take the lot within the existing plan?

Illustrative London scenario. The operator sets the dispatch cutoff and releases the stock.

The buyer can answer in their own words

“Twelve crates at seventeen pounds, if you can deliver before two.”

One shared inventory ledger across connected channels

WhatsApp, SMS and email adapters. Illustrative workflow. Live provider validation pending.

Two buyers can claim the final eight

8

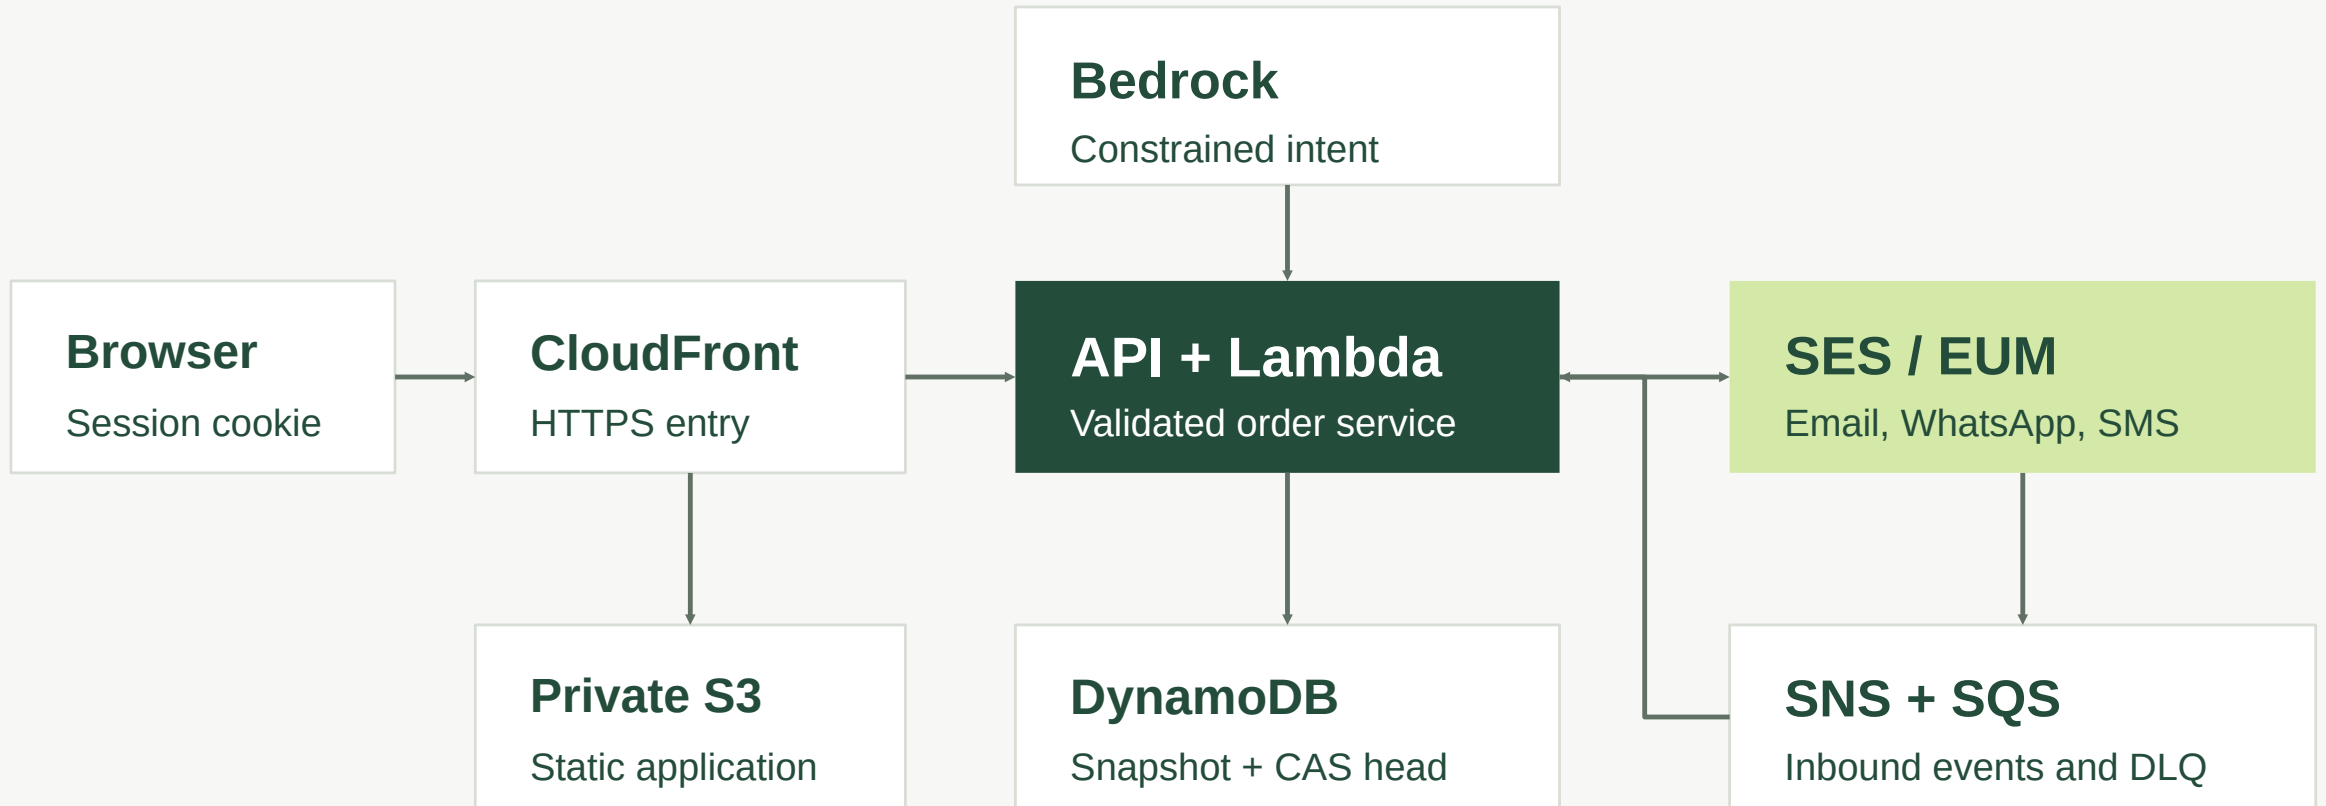

crates remain

Conditional state update

Version checks and event IDs protect stock when replies race or providers retry.

Deployable AWS architecture

Cloud validation pending. Secrets Manager, CloudWatch and queued-send recovery support the application.
Current provider-event configuration routes to one live workspace. Full diagram accompanies this deck.

The example books £708 in sales

Buyer	Crates	Price	Sales
Olive & Rye	12	£17	£204
The Sunday Table	20	£18	£360
Final-stock winner	8	£18	£144
Total	40		£708

£228

above £480 book cost

200 kg

allocated to orders

Handling, transport and software reduce the spread. Booked sales are distinct from cash collected.

The first buyer is a depot manager

One depot. Existing buyers.
A missed order to recover.

191,000

tonnes redistributed in the UK in 2023

A proposed £299 monthly subscription

60 additional crates at £5 contribution would cover the monthly price.

WRAP redistribution survey [1]

Choco handles wholesale ordering. Too Good To Go sells surplus to consumers.
SecondCrate focuses on cancellation recovery within an existing B2B network. [2, 3]

Sources: [1] WRAP, 2023 survey. [2] Choco OrderAgent, July 2026. [3] Too Good To Go Parcels.

A paid pilot will test the business case

- 01 Understand the last three cancellations
- 02 Measure two weeks of the current process
- 03 Run a four-week paid pilot at three depots

Renewal and incremental contribution decide what happens next.

Shivam Gupta / AI-assisted development / Cloud validation pending